In the late 1950s and early 1960s, Brown and his student at the time, Jean Berko Gleason, undertook the first experimental studies on children's language development. The study published by Brown and Gleason in 1960 "Word Association and the Acquisition of Grammar" attempts to answer whether children's gradual tendency to make word associations based on parts-of-speech is evidence for the maturation of the human brain to comprehend syntax of the English language.

The Wug Test, created by Professor Jean Berko Gleason, revolutionized what we know about children's language. Since its creation in 1958, it has become a classic, one of the best known studies of children's language in the world. The little creature called a wug, first introduced in the Wug Test, is an icon in the field of linguistics.
