JM. So the other lad hasn't turned up then? I've heard he was on the piss in Vilnius last Thursday night after the match. Got back to his room at 4am and took a phone call from a foreign sounding bloke (he thought he sounded Greek, with a bit of Aussie thrown in, but "now you come to mention it he could have been Scottish").

Note that if a work's primary conflict is about Evil Versus Evil, then there is a serious risk of Too Bleak, Stopped Caring. If the viewers/players/readers cannot support any faction, they may simply not care. This may be averted by making one of the sides more sympathetic, a villain with standards, or at least some likable trait to endear them to the audience.
